

I found more
life-long friends at Creighton's
orientation
than in four years of high school

We
just finished building our human pyramid in the garden when it collapsed, and we were all laughing so hard – when it suddenly hit me – these were more like brothers and sisters than a bunch of strangers.

We were starting at Creighton, but all for different reasons: The Jesuit tradition. The U.S. News Best Colleges rating. Fantastic science facilities. Mentoring in Omaha schools. 14 big-time sports teams. Or small classes with no TA's. (I didn't know what a TA was then, but I learned – real teachers really matter.)

My reasons were practical: my chance of graduating in four years was three times better at Creighton than at the big public universities in my state.

But now, I remember lying in the grass, in our wrecked human pyramid, laughing. Looking back, my very best reasons to come to Creighton were all around me.
